

Wedding Gown Trends For 2019

For the modern bride who's always in style, here are the top wedding gown trends of 2019:

Meghan Markle Mania

The Duchess of Sussex has inspired many of this year's trends, including clean lines and simple tailoring, boat necks and high-neck halters (inspired by her reception dress).

Two Pieces

Crop-tops are making their way from the runway to the aisle. Separates hit the scene a few years ago, but the matching crop-top/high-waisted skirt combo is still making a big splash.

Polka Dots

For the fun bride who loves a touch of whimsy, dotted dresses popped up all over spring 2019 runways in fabrics like flocked tulle and point d'esprit (a.k.a. Swiss dot).

Metallics

Gold and silver accents as well as full-blown disco-inspired gowns ruled the runways. For the bride who loves glitz and glamour, a metallic dress is a fun break from the ordinary.

Blue

Why not make your "something blue" your entire gown? For the bride who breaks the rules, blue is the non-traditional color of the year with designers sending dresses down the runway in everything from soft powder blue to deep violet.
